ew parents-to-be will do all kinds of homework leading up to the birth of their baby, from planning for a healthy delivery to researching the safest car seat, and everything in between. Though no parent wants to imagine a baby in need of life-saving care, it’s also important to become familiar with the best health care options available for newborns, just in case.

Many hospitals offer a neonatal intensive care unit, but only a select few are rated by the American Academy of Pediatrics as a Level 4 – the highest level available – and even fewer are among the top 20 NICUs in the nation, according to U.S. News & World Report. CHOC Children’s NICU is that and more. In the last decade, the Orange County children’s hospital has become more dedicated than ever to saving babies’ lives and preventing health complications resulting from risky or premature birth. That is made possible by specialized care in CHOC’s newest neonatal units, the very latest in life-saving equipment and a trained team committed to setting a new standard of care.

Not Just a Typical NICU
CHOC’s 54-bed NICU is much more than the name implies. Within its walls are specialized units staffed with even more specialized doctors and nurses, ready and waiting to care for babies depending on their very unique needs.

In a dark, quiet corner is the Small Baby Unit, the only one of its kind on the West Coast. The smallest and sickest babies are treated here, those who are born prematurely at less than 28 weeks gestation, or who weigh less than 1,000 grams.

Babies on this unit lie inside shrouded incubators that keep light away from their underdeveloped eyes. Even a whisper is harsh for these babies’ ears, so families and staff members speak in a gentle “library voice.” The goal is to mimic the womb's environment as closely as possible so that infants can focus on growing.

Just down the hall, CHOC has created another special unit, called the Surgical NICU. CHOC performs some of the most complex neonatal surgeries, including mandibular distraction and ex utero intra-partum (EXIT) procedures. Because of a baby’s small size and complex conditions, surgery can be more difficult than for older children or adults. The Surgical NICU is one of only a handful available in the United States and is a dedicated space for neonatologists and pediatric surgeons to collaborate on care for babies who need surgery. The Surgical NICU team has developed new treatment standards for these special patients, including guidelines around pain management, anesthesia, medication dosing, body temperature, wound care and feeding. The Surgical NICU also has the ability to convert a room within the NICU into a state-of-the-art operating room when the need arises. All surgical equipment, supplies and technology, including extracorporeal membrane oxygenation (ECMO) and high-frequency ventilation, are readily available, just as they are in CHOC’s traditional operating rooms.

A third highly customized area of the NICU is designed for babies with neurological concerns. This unit provides 24-hour coverage by pediatric neurorlogists and equipment for long-term video electroencephalography (EEG) monitoring and whole body cooling. Long-term video EEG monitoring is used to evaluate a baby’s brain activity and behavioral activity for an extended period of time, which is crucial for detecting newborn seizures that are not always physically apparent. Whole body cooling is also important for protecting a baby’s brain and is used to prevent neurological disability or death if a baby has been deprived of oxygen. The technology uses a safe, monitored process to lower a baby’s body temperature and cool the brain for 72 hours, and then slowly re-warm the baby for an additional four to 12 hours.

“This is one of the many ways the CHOC NICU is improving the long-term quality of life for newborns,” says Dr. Vijay Dhar, medical director of the CHOC NICU. “This technology can make a tremendous difference in the lives of children throughout the region, and we’re proud to be offering it.”

A Supportive Environment for Parents, Too
CHOC understands the fear and anxiety experienced by parents of NICU patients. It’s one of the reasons mom and dad are part of the care team, and are encouraged to spend as much time at their baby’s bedside as possible. Parents are also encouraged to provide skin-to-skin “kangaroo care” as soon as it’s safe for the baby. And, parents are always welcome to participate in rounds, when the infant’s team of physicians, nurses, respiratory therapists and others discuss his or her progress.

“We strive to provide a real family environment for our patients and their families,” Dr. Dhar says. “Although we take great pride in our expertise and experience, no one knows a child better than a parent.”

Serving the Region and Beyond
CHOC’s neonatal services go beyond the hospital’s main campus in Orange. Nearby at St. Joseph Hospital, CHOC has a Level 2, 13-bed NICU just steps away from the hospital’s postpartum unit, ready to begin treatment as soon as necessary. It features all private rooms, providing privacy and sleeping accommodations for families. CHOC also offers a Level 3 NICU at CHOC Children’s at Mission Hospital, in collaboration with the Mission Viejo hospital’s labor and delivery unit. CHOC neonatal care teams are able to be present during high-risk births and can move babies to the NICU within minutes.

CHOC also boasts a highly experienced transport team available at a moment’s notice to bring newborns from other hospitals throughout the region to a CHOC NICU for critical care. The team transports babies by road and by air with the very latest in life-saving equipment that can mean the difference in the minutes during transport. And if prenatal testing has identified issues that will need to be addressed immediately when a baby is born, the transport team can be alerted ahead of time to be on call and move a baby to CHOC after birth.

Imagine your practice functioning at peak performance. Its work processes are systematic, streamlined, and thorough. No-shows have been reduced to a bare minimum. Claims spend less time in accounts receivable and a higher percentage of total charges are paid. Thus, your practice generates more revenue with fewer hours of work.

To reach this idealized state requires both dedication and expert assistance. You should try to continuously track, benchmark, and improve overall performance while always looking for ways to re-engineer work processes to free up time for revenue-generating activities. Doing so can help your practice to be more nimble and profitable. Here are several ideas:

Details Make a Difference

In collaboration with your CPA firm, your practice can establish key finance-related initiatives, such as adopting measures to minimize billable time lost to patient no-shows. This includes matching appointment capacity to patient demand to reduce backlog and schedule “churn.”

You can also grow your patient panel through referrals and direct marketing. And scheduling appointment requests within a week can reduce the likelihood of no-shows.

Your practice must establish patient eligibility in advance to maximize time spent during an appointment. For instance, contact ineligible patients ahead of time so they can check with their insurers about eligibility. Facilitate a smooth flow of information between the front desk and the billing office to help minimize denials, maximize point of service collections and avoid registration errors. Cross-train staff to perform critical tasks during busy periods.

Master Patient Appointments

Inform patients before appointments of the payment amounts they owe and their payment options. Collect copays/deductibles (current and overdue) to avoid the cost, unreliability, and delays associated with billing via mail. Allow patients to make automatic monthly bill payments using their credit cards.

Bill appointments immediately and follow up to ensure claims are received by the payer and subsequently paid. Be sure to review and appeal denials and underpays quickly. Follow-up on uncollected self-pay balances to determine whether patients understand their obligations, then review overall billing and collection performance monthly.

UC Irvine Health Branches Out

UC Irvine Health is on the move in several communities in Orange County and beyond. Nationally recognized for its premier physicians and healthcare services, the healthcare enterprise recently opened new outpatient care locations near Newport Beach, Orange and Tustin and announced an affiliation with Corona Regional Medical Center that will extend UC Irvine Health specialists to Corona and nearby communities.

The expansion of services to settings beyond the hospital’s primary Orange medical center is a move to increase residents’ access to exceptional and affordable care, a concept at the heart of healthcare reform, says Teresa Conk, UC Irvine Health’s chief strategy officer. By opening outpatient centers and developing strategic partnerships with other organizations, UC Irvine Health is redesigning the delivery of primary care and improving the coordination of care, especially for people with chronic disease.

“Over time, that’s going to reduce the cost of care and keep people healthy,” Conk says.

“Impact and unique aspects of Orange County’s only academic medical center are being pushed out into the community,” she says. For example, Google Glass technology, already in place at the hospital, will be piloted at select community sites in upcoming months. “We’re offering the most advanced, comprehensive and coordinated care at convenient locations,” Conk adds.

Primary Care Centers in Orange and Tustin

Primary care (family medicine, internal medicine and pediatrics), has never been easier to access for residents near Orange and Tustin who seek the high-quality, world-class care provided by UC Irvine Health. Two new primary care centers have opened in those cities staffed by the UC Irvine Health Medical Group.

Primary care physicians focus on partnering with patients to prevent illness, effectively managing their current health conditions, and keeping small health problems from becoming more serious. Patients who need referrals to specialists will be connected to a system of more than 500 specialty physicians, many of whom are nationally recognized experts in their specialties.

The Orange and Tustin centers include on-site laboratory services for expedient processing of test results. The Tustin location also provides after-hours urgent care on evenings and weekends. Plans are already underway to bring renowned UC Irvine Health physicians from nearly a dozen specialties to Tustin. This is an extraordinary convenience for patients who can now see their primary care physician and specialist physician at a single location.

“Consumers today are seeking convenient and affordable high-quality healthcare services. We’re building comprehensive centers that are a one-stop shop: primary care, specialty care, laboratory, diagnostic imaging and after-hours urgent care — all in an integrated setting,” Conk says.

UC Irvine Health Cancer Center—Newport

The UC Irvine Health Cancer Center—Newport is staffed by highly trained hematologic oncologists offering the latest treatments to battle cancer. With laboratory, pharmacy and infusion services conveniently on site, the center provides a tranquil, spa-like and healing environment for patients undergoing chemotherapy. Patients have access to the expertise of the UC Irvine Health Chao Family Comprehensive Cancer Center, one of only 41 National Cancer Institute-designated comprehensive cancer centers in the country. These centers provide the highest quality cancer care and advance medicine through research and clinical trials.

The Newport medical office building is also home to other UC Irvine Health services:

- Pacific Breast Care Center
- Orthopaedic and Sports Medicine Center

The affiliation with Corona Regional “allows us to extend our expertise for the benefit of the residents of Riverside and San Bernardino counties,” Conk says.

Health Care Transformation Begins in the Workplace

One of the most important transformations underway in health care today is the move towards prevention and wellness. Chronic diseases are the number one cause of death and disability in the US. Every year 1.7 million Americans die from a chronic disease — accounting for 7 out of every 10 deaths in our country. As one of California’s leading health systems and one of Southern California’s largest employers, MemorialCare promotes employee wellness to reduce risk for lifestyle-related chronic conditions such as diabetes and hypertension.

“One of the best places to transform health care is in the workplace,” says Tammie Brailsford, RN, Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer. “That’s where most people spend the majority of their waking hours. So, that’s where we began our employee wellness journey. Six years ago MemorialCare implemented an award winning prevention and wellness program, known as The Good Life, for its 11,500 employees.”

Fork, Feet and Fingers

There are three key areas to focus on in order to improve health. Dr. David Katz, Director of Yale University Prevention Research Center stresses that what we do with our fork, our feet and our fingers determines what we do to our future health. To that end, MemorialCare has created a work environment that supports healthy food choices, creates opportunities to keep active and is smoke-free. With fitness challenges, onsite gyms and walking trails, nutritious cafeteria offerings, weight loss reduction programs and more, over 77 percent of MemorialCare’s employees report that their organization makes an effort to help improve their health. In a recent renovation of MemorialCare’s 15-acre, 300,000 square foot property in Fountain Valley, the health system included walking workstations and sit-stand desks to help keep employees active.

Knowledge is power, so MemorialCare also offers employees annual opportunities to learn important biometric numbers like blood pressure, blood glucose and cholesterol, as well as confidential personal health assessments. Using a personalized, confidential online portal, employees can access health resources including a personal scorecard, exercise and nutrition planners, wellness coaching, wellness challenges and more.

Success in Managing Chronic Conditions

Chronic diseases like hypertension, diabetes, asthma and depression are responsible for more than 75% of health care costs, so addressing these conditions can help lower health care expenses. MemorialCare partners with employees who have chronic conditions like high blood pressure, diabetes and hyperlipidemia to make long-lasting lifestyle changes, lessen complications, improve outcomes and lower medical and pharmaceutical costs through an innovative program, The Good Life – In Balance. With 87 percent participant retention, the In Balance program has led to clinically significant improvements in participants’ blood glucose and blood pressure levels. These include a 0.9 average reduction in participants HgA1c in year one and an additional 0.4 reduction in year two. Participants experienced an average reduction of 20/13 in blood pressure in year one, and an additional 16/5 average reduction in year two.

Linking Benefits to Behavior

As a partner in health of more than 18,000 employees and dependents, MemorialCare designs health care benefits that are financially sustainable for families and for the organization. Employees are able to qualify for lower cost Good Life Medical Insurance plans by completing a confidential personal health assessment and biometric screening, and participating in wellness related activities or self care. Since its launch in 2013, more than half of MemorialCare’s employees have taken the steps needed to qualify for these plans.

Managing Employer-Sponsored Health Care Spending

“Wellness solutions can improve employee health and well-being, increase employee engagement and decrease absenteeism,” according to Brailsford. “And MemorialCare’s commitment to employee health and wellness has resulted in significant reductions in its health care spending rate, dramatically below the national average.” A recent nationwide survey conducted by Mercer revealed the national average increase in the employer-sponsored health care spending rate was 8.5 percent over the past 5 years. MemorialCare’s annual increase was 4.9 percent. Normalized for one year when the health system, a self-insured employer, experienced several outlier cases, the system’s average rate increase over the 5 years was 3.5 percent, just above annual CPI. A combination of The Good Life health and wellness initiatives linked to benefit design and strong rate negotiations led to the results.

Myth:
As long as other kids are vaccinated, mine doesn’t need to be.

Truth:
All children need to be vaccinated.

It’s important that as many children as possible are up to date on their vaccinations to ensure those children who can’t be vaccinated are safe. During recent whooping cough epidemics, it was shown that there were higher rates of disease in geographic pockets where there were lower rates of vaccination. Now more than ever, keeping our kids healthy is up to all of us.

Managing Stress in Today’s Fast-Paced Culture

Stress is an emotional and physical reaction that we are all a little too familiar with. We tend to work too hard, have too many responsibilities, and so many people to please that it can be difficult for us to manage the stress that comes with our lives. Being overwhelmed, overworked, and depended upon too much can cause stress to develop into a normal feeling and reaction. Stress is such a prevalent factor in today’s fast-paced world that many of us go through our daily routine ignoring the psychological and physical effects that it may have on us. Stress is a major setback in how we live our lives to the fullest. We need to shift our attention to how we can better manage stress and our overall wellness.

Anxiety, neck and back pain, and increased or decreased appetite are some of the major symptoms of stress. To rid yourself of stress and its symptoms, one must be active in stress management techniques: eating a healthy diet, exercising and meditation. There are many ways you can manage stress and one of the best solutions is to get a massage!

According to the American Psychological Association,

5 Things to Consider When Merging a Medical Practice

The Affordable Care Act has imposed some major challenges to physicians. Many physicians are considering a merger of their medical practice into a larger medical group or a hospital system. There are a number of issues that need to be considered. Below are five issues that should be addressed.

1. Culture: Every medical practice has its own culture and, while evaluating a merger, one has to review the culture in both of the practices and make sure the merging practices will be able to adjust to a new culture over a period of time and thrive.

2. Valuation of the practice: One should use an experienced valuation professional to determine the estimated fair market value of the practice. This valuation will be used as the basis for negotiation between the parties.

3. Compensation Structure: Physicians are accustomed to receiving compensation based upon their production and collections from the medical services they have performed. In joining a larger group, the compensation formula may include other factors. Accordingly, physicians should address and document a clear understanding of the compensation formula so there are no misunderstandings. A new employment agreement should be drafted for the physician so the terms of the agreement are documented.

4. Staffing: After a merger, some staff positions may be eliminated. This issue should be discussed in advance so staff can be informed as to what employment opportunities are available.

5. Liabilities: One should determine if the existing malpractice insurance policies will be continued after the merger. If not, necessary arrangements need to be made for tail coverage, which may be expensive and should be a consideration when evaluating the merger.

Above all, if due to unforeseen circumstances, the merger is not successful, there should be clauses in the merger agreement on the rights and responsibilities of the parties concerned and how the assets/liabilities of the practice will be handled.
