WARMINGTON
BUILDING A LEGACY SINCE 1926

The evolution of a company: “Homebuilder to

With a rich history that spans nine decades, Warmington is proud to have played a unique role in the development of Southern California and beyond. In a rare display of longevity, growth, and versatility, the Warmington group of companies has been continuously operating and building a legacy since 1926.

1926: William C. Warmington founded the very first Warmington company in Los Angeles, as a custom homebuilder for Hollywood executives and luminaries including Shirley Temple, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Claudette Colbert and Henry Fonda, among others. Warmington quickly earned a reputation as the "homebuilder to the stars." Its homes were in up-and-coming locations of that time: Bel Air, Beverly Hills, Brentwood, Westwood, and Hancock Park. Many of these custom estate residences still stand today and are revered for their style, history, and impressive craftsmanship.

1933: In 1933, William's son, Edward G. Warmington, joined his father's firm. Before that decade ended, Ed was specializing in smaller homes of 2,500 to 3,500 square feet.

As the 1940s unfolded, Warmington was building its first "tract" homes in areas like Lakewood and Bellflower, suburbs of Los Angeles. As it became apparent that Beverly Hills and its environs were filling rapidly and that good housing for moderate income families was needed, especially later in that decade as the post-war building boom was in full swing, that early Warmington company began to place more emphasis on tract development.

1957: Having worked for his father since the mid-1960's, Jim Warmington Sr., assumed leadership of the family's company as president. Determined to meet the strong demand for housing and recognizing an opportunity to further grow his company, Jim Sr. expanded into new areas like Centinela, Cypress, Anaheim, Orange, Santa Ana, Irvine, and others. It was during this time that Warmington began to build and market a "townhouse" project.

This pioneering effort proved to be a huge success and pointed the way for much of that company's activities in the coming years. Also, during this time, the company introduced several distinctive product lines or "series of homes" that offered the variety, style, and price point to appeal to all types of buyers and helped Warmington create its niche in the planned community environment that was emerging.

1977 - 1996: The 1970's were a time of great growth for Warmington. In addition to expanding its product line and market areas locally and regionally with its expansion into Northern California, new business endeavors saw the formation of what is today Warmington Properties, Inc., and Chateau Interiors & Design. These new Warmington companies meant increased diversification and specialization into the realms of interior design and ultimately options management, as well as building apartment communities and commercial and multifamily acquisitions, and property management in multiple states including California, Nevada, and Arizona. Warmington further expanded its presence in 1996 when it opened a Nevada division and began building new homes and apartments in the Las Vegas area.

More than a Home Builder. A full service Real Estate Organization.

With its long history and abundance of new homes in markets throughout California and Nevada, the Warmington name is most often associated with homebuilding. But Warmington also is a property management company with a portfolio of both multifamily and commercial properties valued at more than $875 million.
2007: Jim Warrington Jr. became President, officially beginning the group’s fourth generation of Warrington family leadership. By December, the world had officially entered “the great recession and once again, Warrington fell back on its strength, conservatism, and diversification as it adjusted to these new realities and found its niche in a depressed market. A corporate reorganization that reduced overhead and improved efficiency positioned Warrington to concentrate its efforts on projects not sought after by the bigger, public builders, who generally favored those with higher lot counts and finished lots. Warrington leveraged its reputation and built personal relationships with sellers, thereby gaining access to many “off market” opportunities.

2011-2016: In 2011, Warrington’s acquisition strategy of identifying sub-markets that were displaying strengthening demand and stabilizing prices, which primarily included infill locations within positive employment areas and low resale distress, had begun to pay off.

A major turning point came in 2012 when Warrington was selected by the Rancho Mission Viejo company to build the first new neighborhood in four years within the South Orange County gaterd village of Covenant Hills, in Ladera Ranch. The Legacy Collection, as it was known, was very well received because of its innovative single-level styling that included a strong emphasis on indoor/outdoor living spaces, and its luxurious, view-oriented setting. This was a signal that the market was coming back. There was pent-up demand, and shoppers were ready to buy when the opportunity and price were right. Warrington bolstered its land acquisition teams in all of its divisions, combining its core strengths of longevity and experience with its current model of versatility and ingenuity to acquire new deals and achieve sales success in a wide variety of markets with multiple product types.

The group continues to actively seek revenue-generating projects that fall within its expertise, land development, and homebuilding expertise, and is aggressively looking for new acquisitions that maximize its primary expertise of entitlement and developing land, and building homes to create beautiful residential communities.

In 2016, Warrington celebrates 90 years and four generations of family leadership. Jim Warrington Jr is now serving as CEO, overseeing the management and executive responsibilities of the Warrington group of companies. Matt Tingler became president of Warrington Residential in January.

Around the block a few times,
In its nine decades, Warrington has seen and survived it all—from Great Depression through Great Recession. Starting with the lows of the stock market crash in 1929, through the ensuing great depression, “stagflation” in the 1970’s, record-high inflation rates in the 1980’s, the commodities crisis brought on by the great recession that began in 2007, Warrington’s strength, conservative business practices and ability to adapt has ensured its success for 90 years.

Still growing after all these years,

A lasting glow instead of a flash,
As a custom homebuilder, Warrington worked with many renowned Los Angeles architects in the 1950’s through 1940’s like Wallace Neff, Paul Williams and Gerard Colcord. These architects and many of the homes they designed have withstood the test of time and are still revered today, commanding impressive prices at market. Warrington had the privilege of crafting these homes and was credited for, “giving the architect’s genius its fullest expression and delivering work of the highest order.”

Our most famous spokesman,
In the 1970’s, Warrington had the distinct honor of working with Mr. Dick Van Dyke. He thought very highly of Warrington and its commitment to excellence and did some promotions on our behalf. Warrington built many homes for movie stars, but getting to work with Dick Van Dyke definitely was a high point and a huge benefit to us having ties to Hollywood.

It seems fitting that, as we celebrate the 90th Anniversary of Warmington Residential, Matt White Custom Homes would announce its latest project with the storied homebuilder: Tablelands. This new boutique community – currently in development in sought-after Eastside Costa Mesa – continues the tradition of creating quality homes and meaningful communities for which Matt White Custom Homes and Warmington Residential are known.

“The influence of Warmington Residential in our industry can’t be overstated,” says Matt White, founder of Matt White Custom Homes. “Our company continues to draw inspiration from Warmington’s legacy, and we are honored to be collaborating with them on our latest project, Tablelands.”

A modern homebuilding company founded on the traditional principles of quality, integrity and value, Matt White Custom Homes (MWCH) is one of the most trusted builders of new home communities and fine custom homes throughout Southern California. Tablelands, the firm’s third development partnership with Warmington Residential, encompasses an exclusive collection of eight single-family detached homes in a prime Eastside Costa Mesa location.

Inspired by the coastal farmland history of the site, and in honor of its ideal Costa Mesa location, MWCH selected the name Tablelands – a direct translation of Costa Mesa (Spanish for “coastal tableland”) – for the project. The community is set to premiere in early 2017 and will offer an appealing range of floor plans designed with today’s families in mind. Designed in appealing modern farmhouse style, the homes at Tablelands will span two levels, approximately 1,900 square feet, and feature three to four bedrooms. Each floor plan also includes spacious rooms – indoors and out – for everyday living and entertaining, year-round.

“We intentionally conceived Tablelands to take us back to a simpler time,” says White. “A time when families gathered around the dinner table every night, when kids spent summers playing outdoors from dawn to dusk, and when community meant just that. Tablelands is the type of place where today’s homeowners want to live, raise families, and really know and enjoy their neighbors.”

Family-favorite Eastside Costa Mesa provides the perfect setting for the homes at Tablelands. As one of the most popular addresses in Orange County, Eastside Costa Mesa places homeowners within minutes of the best shopping, dining and entertainment that Costa Mesa and Newport Beach have to offer – as well as the world-class beaches of Newport and Huntington.

Tablelands is set to follow on the success of MWCH’s other intimate communities within Eastside Costa Mesa, including Nautica, Midtown and East Haven. In each of these quickly sold-out developments, MWCH demonstrated that their unique blend of art and science is what makes a home feel like “Home.”

“To us, every home we develop is much more than a project,” says White. “It’s a promise to deliver an extraordinary home for modern living that stands the test of time.”

GREAT FRIENDS

The ones who look after each other—always ready to lend a hand. Kindred spirits with a will to make their community a better place.

Congratulations to our friends at Warmington Residential, on 90 years of excellence in home building.
Honoring a Longtime Partner
"Quality. Ethics. Performance. A business doesn’t reach its 90th year without such essentials," says Robert N. Goodman, Chairman and CEO of The Resmark Companies about investment partner The Warmington Group. For Warmington, these cornerstones are all part of a time-tested approach to developing communities and homes that are important to the residents that call them home. And for equity partner Resmark, the Warmington way is precisely what makes the company a trusted, long-time joint venture development partner.

Since its beginnings in 1926, when William C. Warmington quickly became the go-to “builder to the stars” in and around Hollywood, the company has grown into a full-service real estate organization with expertise in residential home building and community development. From classic Warmington suburban neighborhoods, to innovative homes in urban pockets, the family heritage of craftsmanship stands the test of time and appeals to next-generation buyers.

"While Warmington has always been known for its quality work, what’s equally impressive is that the new generation of leadership, led by CEO Jim Warmington Jr., brings the company’s original brand promise to the modern consumer,” says Connie Emmitt-Stern, Executive Vice President of Investments with Resmark’s Land and Housing group. Keeping a finger on the pulse of what’s current and desired by the modern consumer, Warmington maintains what Emmitt-Stern describes as “a blend of tradition and relevance that’s very unique.”

Sharing a Vision
Teaming up early in the current economic recovery, Warmington and Resmark found they share similar strategies for identifying prime locations in desirable residential submarkets. Together, they have partnered on multiple projects from the hills of Orange County and the streets of Los Angeles to San Francisco’s Peninsula and East Bay.

Equally important, the two companies share values that are as important as the land their developments are built on.

"The first thing we consider when looking at a new investment is, who is the partner? Our business is only as good as the partners we create relationships with," Goodman adds.

"Resmark has many valued partners, and we respect when both sides can come together with a longer term view," Emmitt-Stern points out. “It’s not about a one-time transaction, but a longstanding body of work together. We know Warmington shares this vision, because they value enduring affiliations with lenders and equity partners.”

Celebrating Successful Communities
It was 2012 when Warmington and Resmark joint ventured to develop the Legacy Collection at Covenant Hills in Ladera Ranch. The luxurious homes’ size and price point were considered unusual at the time, but the community was very well-received in the market. It was a bold move, but one that underscored the power of the right partners. Next up was NELA, an innovative urban new home project in L.A.’s up-and-coming Glassell Park, whose close out proved that Warmington could make its mark far from the suburbs.

2016 will see final closings at Annie Street and Talamore, two Bay Area urban infill projects; continuing sales at Trellis and Canopy at Esencia in Rancho Mission Viejo, luxury stacked flats at Opus at Beacon Park in Irvine’s Great Park, as well as at the Driftsong community at Wallis Ranch in Dublin.

Next year is set to be equally active. Warmington and Resmark will continue their partnership with the launch of several additional projects, including Trestle, a sister community to Driftsong; single family attached and detached homes in Silicon Valley’s hot Mountain View zip code; and The E.R.B., a mixed-use and single family development in trendsetting Eagle Rock northeast of Los Angeles.

After nine successful decades, Resmark’s Goodman notes that Warmington has quite literally become a household name among home buyers and the real estate community alike, adding, “This milestone anniversary is truly cause for celebration.”

EPIC Honors Warmington’s Success

Passing on a great legacy of ownership and leadership over a 90-year span is an amazing accomplishment for any company. But when it’s a residential home-building company that can survive the ups and downs of their industry for 90 years, it is a true testament, not only to the integrity and hard work of the owners and employees at Warmington Homes, but also speaks to the quality of their product and their ability to adapt and change to the needs of their customers.

This isn’t to say that over the 90-year period there have not been obstacles on their path to success, but everyone at Warmington Homes remained steadfast; maintained their high standards of construction; followed their business model, even when others disagreed; and found a way to survive and thrive when many others failed, particularly over the most recent long and difficult recession.

Warmington Homes has proven time and time again that they can build with attention to detail and high quality, yet maintain a reasonable and competitive price point for their customer. We hope that this 90th year will provide nothing but ongoing positive results for Warmington and give them renewed strength and ingenuity to survive another 90!

With all of the changes in the surety industry over the past decade, we are proud to remain a part of Warmington Homes’ surety team for more than 35 years and thank Warmington for their continued partnership with us. We wish for many more decades of success and extend a heartfelt “congratulations” to the entire Warmington Family on this fantastic milestone of 90 years in business!
